Regulations for electronic communication between client and Steuerkanzlei Ekrem Uyulur, Zirkusweg 1, 20359 Hamburg (hereinafter: StB)

The client wants correspondence via SMS, WhatsApp, social media, other message service providers, email and fax.

1. email-communication

If the transmission of data is not protected by suitable encryption in the context of electronic communication between the client and StB or other third parties (e.g. credit institutions), there is a fundamental risk that data can be intercepted and read by third parties. Knowing this risk, the client wishes to receive correspondence by email to the following email address without any further security measures:

eMails: _____

2. Regulation on sensitive data

The StB may send or receive unsecured annual financial statements, tax returns, business evaluations and all other data and documents to the client and to third parties with whom the client has a business relationship (e.g. credit institutions) if the transmission or receipt is included from the assignment.

3. Regulations on data from third parties

If data of third parties are affected (e.g. payrolls, data of spouse), the client must obtain the consent of this data. The StB assumes that the consent is given as long as there is no other information from the client.

The client or affected third parties can revoke this consent at any time.
